Beogram CD 50 was Bang & Olufsen's very first CD player designed to be part of a stacking system and first featured in the 1983/84 product catalogue and allowed Beosystem 5000 owners to use all the buttons on the Master Control Panel 5000. Beogram CD 50 was a front-loading CD player.

BeoGram CD50 Compact Disc Player - BeoWorld
It is debatable whether the Beogram CD 50 or the Beogram CD X was the first B&O compact disc player. A prototype CD 50 was certainly shown first, in the 1985 catalogue. However, in detail this machine was clearly different from those which would finally become available over a year later, by which time the CD X was also included in the range.

Though very similar to look at to Beogram CD 50, this all-new Philips-based machine was a radical departure, both in manufacturing and technical terms. Beogram CD 5500 was the first CD player to be entirely designed by Bang & Olufsen and with the exception of the optical deck, it was entirely made by the company too.

The CD player was based around the Philips CD104, built in Belgium. As a standalone player, it lacked the Datalink and remote control facilities that its predecessor, the Beogram CD50, possessed. A good-looking CD player which performed well, it was later superseded by the Beogram CDX-2 in 1987. Bang & Olufsen Sales Training System
