Hannah Green And Her Unfeasibly~~

The titular Hannah Green is a young girl dealing with the break up of her parents' marriage. Her mother has left her father for a work colleague, and has moved from the West Coast of the USA to London. The marriage break up is the unfeasibly mundane part of Hannah's life. So common a set of experiences and so frequent.

Hannah Green and her unfeasibly mundane existence is the kind of book that feels like it is revealing some of the secrets of the universe. For example, I now know why some people seem to be travelling under their own personalised dark cloud (Vaneclaw) and where my mother got her recipe for ratatouille (Frankie's).

Hannah Green actually thinks her story is more mundane than most. But she's about to discover that the shadows in her life have been hiding a world where nothing is as it seems: that there's an ancient and secret machine that converts evil deeds into energy, that some mushrooms can talk – and that her grandfather has been friends with the Devil for over a hundred and fifty years, and now they need her help.

Hannah Green and Her Unfeasibly Mundane Existence. By now Hannah was stumbling with tiredness but Granddad insisted they go downstairs to get dinner, on the grounds that this would help her get over the jetlag more quickly. The Devil and the imp did not come with them. They sat alone in a cavernous room and ate something that was halfway between a soup and a stew.

Hannah Green and Her Unfeasibly Mundane Existence. Hannah hadn't understood what this word meant. Aunt Zo waved her hands vaguely, and said, 'Well, you know. Mundane.'. Later Hannah looked it up on the internet. The internet said that the word came from the Latin mundus, meaning 'world', and thus referred to things 'of the earthly world, rather than a heavenly or spiritual one'.

Hannah is a smart 11 year old who learns more about her grandfather when sent to stay with him while her father navigates a very messy separation from Hannah's mother, and winds up missing himself. The Devil, an inept imp named Vaneclaw, and a black squirrel all embark on a journey to find the machine Hannah's grandfather built that filters all bad deeds down to Hell, because it's broken.
