The Nikon F4 was the first Nikon F-series to remove the manual film advance lever. They opted for the motor-driven system which also operates the rewind (though you can still rewind manual if you wish to preserve battery reserve). So, with the motor system, you fire away and it automatically advances to the next frame.

Nevertheless, the appearing of the Nikon F4, and soon later, of the F4s and the F4e really caught many of us by surprise. A professional camera with auto focus and manual capabilities like no other before, lending itself to adapt to any photographic situation.

The Nikon F4 Review

The Nikon F4 was introduced to the world, in 1988, as a replacement for the workhorse F3, which had been brought to market eight years earlier. The term "game-changer" is thrown around at today's camera-release press conferences with relative abandon but, when it arrived, the Nikon F4 was a true game-changer.
