But I adored Paula Treick DeBoard's first novel, THE MOURNING HOURS, so I decided to trust her to tell me another good story. I'm so glad I did. This novel isn't really about a dead boy as much as it's about how we, as fragile humans, manage to keep putting one foot in front of the other despite the terrible tragedies that seem to be occurring all around us, as if we're walking through a canyon of falling rocks.
